

Short Takes, On Obama, The Front Man

By George McClellan

The votes are in, the die is cast and we independent conservative Americans are left standing around wondering what the hell happened to us. Our America has all but been swept away. A majority of voters installed a charismatic half black (half white) candidate who said he was “ready to ‘rule’ from day one” and who, experience now shows, is totally unqualified for the post as either ruler or leader. The resume of his experience, limited to being a Chicago community organizer, plus a few short years as a State Senator and then a US Senator, were apparently all that was needed to justify his qualifications and sweep him into office surrounded by the rapturous bleating’s of the liberal sheep who put him there and the fawning media who keeps him there.

Many of us, of an age to remember and experience the horrors of a previously acceptable, charismatic speaker whose policies plunged the world into a truly destructive world war, and who also wrote a book telling us exactly how he would do it, actually picked up one or two of the books our President (allegedly) wrote which accurately described what we have today.

What is known, if anyone troubled to read them, is that while being half black, he is not a product of the African-American experience and does not relate to their story. To him, America’s black population is nothing more than a collection of obsolete farm machinery useful only as voters and, possibly, future storm troopers. The genetic product of a Muslim, black African father from Kenya and a white American, socialist mother from Kansas, and thoroughly educated in the disciplines of Marxism, has made him messiah like and put him on the path down which America is now trudging, to financial insolvency and collective thinking, under his charismatic but stumbling leadership. He believes that Capitalism is evil and achievers must be punished, their ill-gotten gains to be redistributed to the “less fortunate”.

It is alleged that his books were ghost written by Bill Ayres, formerly a terrorist, a convicted felon, bomber, and killer. Without his teleprompter, he appears lost, indeed clueless about what he is talking about. His entire life seems to be orchestrated. He is the face on the wall but not the man behind the curtain. His administration is composed of “czars” all of whom are dedicated Marxist-Socialists. Question: Are they there to do his bidding or are they there to watch him? Obama’s educational history remains unknown; his birth history is a mystery (he wasn’t born in a manger), his life appears to have been pre-planned but, he is clearly not running the show. His czars, and others behind the scene, have been left wing radicals for thirty years and are deeply committed to changing the hated American system of independence, free enterprise and free choice. All his policies, foreign and domestic, are in tatters and he articulates no coherent thread of common sense that holds them together. He is an articulate but empty suit. It’s time we started to look behind that curtain and see who is really controlling the “great and powerful Ozama”.
