

Short Takes

A Terrible Warning

In hind sight, Obama's State of the Union Speech was a much more significant moment in America's recent political history than even the Massachusetts election victory of Scott Brown. Like many others I had thought that Brown's victory, on the heels of the two other significant conservative victories for Blue State governorship's, was the most important political message ever delivered to an incumbent president and his political party in recent history, after only one year in office.

So, what makes the SOTU speech more important than the conservatives election victories? Because it was a threat. It lies in the singular fact that PBO publicly warned us that he did not listen to the message or, if he did, that he ignored it completely because we apparently didn't understand his progressive program. Before all of America, on prime time TV, he put us on alert that his Progressive programs for creating his idea for a "nanny state" was more important than America's message that we didn't want it. He signaled his belief that we obviously didn't understand his programs because he apparently failed to deliver it correctly. Stand by for more Obama sales speeches all base upon the "progressive theory" of government supremacy over our individual freedoms, in effect, ignoring the US Constitution. This should be an impeachable act.

The odious creature who is Speaker of the House of Representatives, in her defiant remarks to the press, compounded the threat by telling Americans she would take all measures to pass the Obama health care plan regardless of the political fallout. Neither Obama or Pelosi are afraid of the citizens but prefer that the citizens should be afraid of government. Their message has been received, digested and is well understood by a now very alert citizenry. The new PBO Budget for 2011 is a remarkable confirmation of the progressive's aim to destroy America economically before it can recover from their depredations. Putting our nation further in debt, by trillions of dollars, is to destroy America. Republicans now serving in the House and Senate seem, for the moment, to be united in facing the dangers confronting us but I have the strange sense that they are not confronting the dangers facing us. Except for House minority leader, Rep. John Boehner and Senate minority leader Mitch McConnell, who are constantly speaking up against the progressive schemes, I hear nothing from the Republican National Committee except constant pleas for donations. Be warned, the progressives have not given up and will press their agenda until they win if it takes another one hundred years.

Now is not the time to let our guard down. Now is not the time to rest on our laurels; Now is the time to redouble our efforts and start to remove the 'professional politicians' who want to rule us. We still have the vote and it is paramount that we find and recruit conservative candidates who understand that America can only be saved when the politicians we send up are not allowed to become permanent or, in their own minds, indispensable to knowing what's best for America. "The government that rules least rules best!" A government of entitlements is a government that intends to impose its own form of slavery. Go get 'em!
