

Slow Learners

Are Americans really slow learners politically? American's basic philosophy has been to view politics, politicians and political parties as a tawdry business but a necessary evil. American's simply want to be left alone and undisturbed and do not want other folks telling them what to do or how to do it. American's are thankful that there are people out there who are actually willing to take up the mantel of politician, but we expect them to follows the rules in doing so. It is in the US Constitution that Americans expect to find their protection from corrupt politicians.

Usually, when something politically goes amiss, American's will "tut-tut", then forget and move on. A few citizens will raise red warning flags but we still generally want to remain on the sidelines and - wait and see. We once put our faith in the "Forth Estate" to keep us properly informed and ferret out the bad guys, but, no more!

All governments, when they think the voters aren't watching will try to slip past us laws intended to help their special friends to the taxpayers money and, in the process, enrich themselves. This starts the corruption process to which governments become vulnerable especially if they are designed around a Constitution which specifically spells out what they cannot do. The Democrat Party, long ago taken over by the far left wing progressive/Socialists, finds the US Constitution to be an impediment to their better plans and therefore to be seriously ignored. This is when Americans start to grumble.

Individually, when we see this happening, we really don't know what to do. We still cling to the notion that our own politicians serve us in our best interest when we instinctively feel that they do not. We seek answers from the Forth Estate which do not satisfy our basic instinct of what's right and what's wrong. Our suspicions start to rise and still we don't know what to do. We see our constitution trashed every day and the trashing supported by the now increasingly unpopular, former main stream media. Reliance on our once favorite news sources, ABC, NBC, CBS, etc., etc., as vehicles for the truth, have been nullified. We now turn to the newest medium of information dissemination, talk radio and the internet for our daily updates. And, we finally come together into such groups at the TEA Party patriots, Freedom Foundation and Americans for Prosperity, just to mention a few.

The current Obama (may peace be upon him) administration is doomed because they know that the slow learners are just starting to catch on. We know that we know nothing about him but elected him in blind faith, a faith which he has destroyed. We know he grew up in other countries and that does not give us that warm feeling that he understands what it is to be an American. We are starting to feel like we have actually been occupied by foreigners; We are becoming very concerned that the occupiers are supplanting our religious ethics and principles with a foreign doctrine that comes to us forcibly unchanged from five hundred years ago. We are becoming alarmed that the occupiers actually favor terrorists and radical extremists over Americans and are disparaging our ally Israel. And, it hasn't escaped our attention that it is the Europeans among us that are the targets of reverse discrimination and it is becoming obvious that the machinery of government is being used to steal the wealth of the producers to redistribute to the non producers. Now they want to steal our talk radio and internet sources, "just to be fair." The slow learners are catching on but it may be too late! Go get 'em! (6 June 10)
