

Restoration, not Revolution

The Democrat party, with its grinning, wax faced, imbeciles, Pelosi, Reid and VP Biden, using terms like “Blitzkrieg” and “swift-boat” to demonize 80% of Americans, rise, like cream to the top, as the epitome of crassness, despair and doom; pitiful examples of what America’s leadership has degenerated into and a metaphor on the intellect the Ivy League geniuses have who want to lead us into the bright, sunshine of a miserable socialist utopia.

Quite apart from probably (hopefully) destroying the Democrat Party, we can thank Obama, (may peace be upon him) for instilling in the American people, a rapidly growing distrust of government, a loathing of its leadership, and a plethora of poignant jokes and cartoons that will doubtless last forever. He has contributed to the abandonment of Americas rules of morality, ordered the ‘sissification’ of our military with no shoot Rules of Engagement, and silly medals for “uncommon restraint.” He has changed NASA’s role from advancing America’s leadership in the exploration of space (where the next war will come from) to advancing America’s pandering to Islam. As for uniting the country, he has had exactly the opposite effect, dividing us into haves and have nots, black and white, and legals and illegals. I do not forget to mention his refusal to prosecute two Black Panthers who were intimidating white voters in Philadelphia and suing Arizona over its illegal immigration law while he himself refuses to enforce the protection of America’s borders. That he hates what America stood for is no longer in doubt. We knew it before he was elected. He said so in his books and in his speeches. We just chose to ignore them in the vain hope that perhaps we were wrong.

The collapse of America’s powerful economic engine of production, including food, once the envy of the world, cannot be laid entirely at the feet of George W. Bush. Blaming the past administration for his own mistaken policy decisions will simply not do any more. Obama’s (may peace be upon him) redistribution of wealth plans through the several guises of Health Care, Cap and Trade, taxpayer funded bailouts of unions and his regressive energy policies, are nothing less than a gangster style looting of the earnings and savings of America’s producers. He has indebted our children and our grandchildren to the Chinese for generations to come. Those are his ideas not Bush’s. Some leadership!

Regardless of the claims by old news media, Obama’s (may peace be upon him) legitimacy as an American citizen is still to be conclusively proved yet evidence appears weekly to brand him a liar. You Tube now has a video of Obama (may peace be upon him) himself, addressing a group of listeners in his own voice saying he was born in Kenya yet they say nothing. Their credibility is on the line too and the falling viewership and declining readership of the once great organs of the fourth estate, are giving way to the new, electronic media and the internet. Now comes Obama (may peace be upon him) with a plan to save America in an emergency if we would but give him the “kill switch” for the internet, to protect us from ourselves.

No, we don’t need a revolution, we need a restoration to the Constitution and the original principles upon which our Republic was formed. We need to be rid of the three stooges and Obama (may peace be upon him) and the sooner the better, say November 2nd. Only if the Republicans should foolishly continue this current administration’s policies when in power will we need a revolution. Elections Count! Go get ‘em! (10 July 2010)
