

Wealth Transfer through Health Care

By George McClellan

August 27, 2009

“My reading of history convinces me that most bad government results from too much government” ...Thomas Jefferson

The health care issue has generated a lot of debate dangerous to the democrats. It would appear that we Americans, who live in fly-over country, are at last waking up to the real threat that promises to debase our history of individualism and capitalism through the obvious wealth transfer scheme being perpetrated upon us by the Democrats. Let's see if we can reason this one out: The Obama health care plan was written by a democrat committee (supervised by Nancy Pelosi) whose chairman admitted he didn't understand it, to be passed by a congress (Democrat) that hasn't read it and whose members will be exempt from it, to be signed by a President who smokes and funded by a Treasury Secretary who is a tax dodger; overseen by a Surgeon General who is obese and to be financed by a nation that is flat broke! What's wrong with this picture? To further obscure the plan, Obama cannot articulate what the points of the plan are, how it is to be funded without adding to the deficit, or who is to be covered. I'm so confused!

It is time for Conservatives, whether Republican or whatever, to realize that bi-partisanship, so desperately desired by the Liberals, is a thing of the past. The Liberals only want bi-partisanship so that Republicans can share the blame for the train wreck that is coming if not have the blame for the whole thing hung around their necks anyway.

Republicans must avoid the Obama health care plan as if it were a confirmed case of rabies or the swine flu. But, how can this be accomplished when a nimrods like John McCain, tells a Town Hall meeting that it is essential that Republicans reach across the aisle to democrats and help craft a health care plan that all will accept. We don't need an overhaul of the health care insurance plan; all that is required is the application of common sense, some inexpensive tweaking and we get the job done. But here, McCain plays right into the hands of the Liberals. To reach across the aisle to the enemy, as McCain argues, is to agree that their premises on health care are correct. To “compromise” on issues that Liberals say need to be addressed means that they have simply added another check off on their victory list of changing America .

This liberal plan for changing America and creating a new world order (Socialist of course) has been in the works ever since FDR introduced Social Security. That was a first step and once Americans got used to it we were hooked. In the beginning it was piddley, and then Liberals thought it would be nice to include other “needy” Americans. Then came Medicare, Medicaid, prescription drugs for the elderly (all the elderly, not just the needy ones) and finally, now, free health care for all. It's like the “Tar Baby” of Uncle Remus fame. We get stuck in that mess deeper and deeper until finally, we expect the government to do every thing for us.

The negative reaction to Obama's health care bill has shocked the Liberals severely but has not knocked them out. Having demonstrated that they do not care what we think or to what their Constitutional limitations are, they will find away around this little problem to enact their plans. The recent death by the far left, arch Liberal, Sen. Ted Kennedy, may provide them with a method to achieve their goal on the Obama Health Care plan. Let's hope the caterwauling that certainly will accompany the Senator's funeral won't turn into a disgusting spectacle like that one which accompanied the death of Minnesota Senator Wellstone a few years back after his airplane plunged headlong into the earth below. But, alas, it has already started: 'Good ol' Ted Kennedy! He was such an advocate for doing good that we should name the Obama health care bill after him instead. And, we should vote it in for him too so we all feel better. Poor ol' Ted!'

It would be churlish, of course, for me to speak ill of the dead, especially as Americas' political world is going through the motions of praising him; but his passing will not be missed by any true American who understands the principles upon which this country was founded and which he so strenuously worked to eliminate. "In lieu of flowers, let's pass health care reform!"

The biggest issue facing Republicans right now, apart from getting the word out as to the total danger the Obama regime is to America, is to clear the decks of the likes of John McCain, Olympia Snowe, and the other moderate appeasers who have not learned from their past mistakes and insist on taking the Republican Party down the road of moderation and appeasement to embrace, in the spirit of bi-partisanship, the false claims of the liberals.

Our next meeting is Sept 1st (not Labor day, as I thought), which is the first Tuesday of the month. I expect that we will host State Senator Lew Hawkins, who recently tossed his hat into the ring to fill the US Congressional seat soon to be vacated by Nathan Deal.

Check out the Gilmer County GOP web site: Gilmergop.org and Gilmer News at Gilmernews.net.

George McClellan, Chairman
Gilmer Co. GOP